Seductive yet naïve, Gigiona is a modular and ever-changing piece, to be observed and reassembled each time with fresh eyes. Made from Murano glass, it consists of six coloured and transparent frames that, once assembled, reveal the silhouette of a woman in the unmistakable graphic style of Olimpia Zagnoli. When disassembled, the figure dissolves into a play of lines and colours, fragmenting into a new visual perception. Always transparent and elusive, Gigiona interacts with perception and light, transforming with every glance – both in its assembled form and when separated, where each element can exist independently or in new combinations.
